

NAME: KIMBERLY E. LEBQUIN

YR/SEC: 1st / OLCA133A009

Instruction: Please do the following activities below.

1. Look for a newspaper article that tackles an ethical issue. Consider the following questions:

a. What makes this a matter of ethics?

Ethics, often known as moral philosophy, is concerned with what is beneficial for individuals and society. The word ethos comes from the Greek word meaning "custom, habit, character, or temperament." The following dilemmas are covered by ethics: how to live a good life. our responsibility and rights

b. What is your own ethical judgment on this case?

Ethical judgment entails weighing the pros and cons of many options and deciding which is the most ethical. When making an ethical decision, a person employs reason to determine the best answer or decision to a situation. In the decision-making process, ethical judgment is crucial.

c. What are your reasons for this judgment?

Judgments, also known as reasons for judgment or reasons, are the explanations given by the court at the end of a hearing to explain why an order is being issued. An order, on the other hand, is the formal manifestation of a court's decision.

2. Is looking after the benefit of your own family over all other aspects considered as another form of egoism? Discuss.

It is NOT egoism to prioritize the needs of your own family over those of others. We can classify your "act" as egoism if it does not serve your own "ego." This act of watching out for your own family, on the other hand, is more of an act of altruism, which is selfless concern for the well-being of others.

3. In your opinion, discuss "What is justice?"

In its broadest definition, justice is the notion that people get what they deserve, with the interpretation of what constitutes "deserving" influenced by a variety of fields and opinions, including the conceptions of moral correctness based on ethics, reason, and so on.

4. What are your self-possession? Explain in 5 to 10 sentences.

English definition of self-possession. the quality of always remaining calm and in control of your emotions: He was stunned at first, but soon regained his composure.

5. Make a short story showing Psychological Egoism.

Assume a soldier uses a grenade to save his comrades. The psychological egoist might argue that the action is in the soldier's best interests because he would be unable to live with himself if he did not sacrifice his own life, or because he would die as a hero, and so forth.